2010 SC Watermelon Queen crowned

Blair Boozer, a 22-year-old West Columbia native and broadcast journalism graduate from the University of South Carolina was crowned as the South Carolina Watermelon Queen on January 23 in Columbia. The Watermelon Queen competition is held annually in conjunction with the Watermelon Growers Association meeting.

"I was shocked," Boozer said of being named Watermelon Queen. "I cannot believe this is happening and I am so humbled and honored they thought I'd be the best girl for job."

As South Carolina Watermelon Queen, Boozer will stay busy promoting locally grown watermelons throughout the state. She will attend festivals, speaking engagements, and give media interviews promoting watermelons.

Boozer said she is looking forward to the farm visits and meeting with the farmers to learn more about the watermelon industry. Her first duty in her new role will be to attend a Queen retreat in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. this April.

Boozer, who grew up in West Columbia, is the daughter of Woody and Sandy Boozer. She is a 2009 graduate from the University of South Carolina's School of Journalism with a Broadcast Journalism degree where she was an active member of the Tri Delta Sorority. She was also a member of the Society of Professional Journalists, Life Scholar and made Deans List every semester while at USC.

With a background in reporting, she wants to tell people the story of South Carolina agriculture.

"Agriculture has a big impact on our state and this gives me a chance to be a part of that impact," she said. "Today a lot of people forget where their food comes from. They don't realize there are people working around the clock to provide us with food."

Boozer received a $750 scholarship from the South Carolina Watermelon Association, and a $500 scholarship from International Paper. She said she plans a career in news reporting.

Showing our "Wild" side... in the kitchen

You may have concluded over recent years the Department of Agriculture has gotten a little wild....what with dressing people up as fruits and vegetables and having them stage protests over not buying local. Or having our Certified SC Grown ads show a fishing boat delivering shrimp in the neighborhood. Well, now it's official - we're going wild - "Wild in the Kitchen" at the Southeastern Wildlife Exposition in Charleston.

The last couple of years we have been involved with the Charleston Food and Wine Festival held in March, introducing our Fresh on the Menu restaurant program at that event in 2008. Now, with our branding campaign going strong, this is an opportunity to reinforce the concept to a new audience. This year our marketing staff will have a presence at the upcoming Southeastern Wildlife Expo (SEWE), February 12-14.

Now in its 28th year, the SEWE has grown to be the largest event of its kind in the nation, attracting more than 500 artists and exhibitors from around the globe who present their offerings to more than 40,000 people that attend each year. A three-day celebration of nature that has earned a reputation for excellence, SEWE now hosts the world's foremost experts in wildlife and nature art, as well as conservation research and environmental education.

The first Southeastern Wildlife Exposition took place in February of 1983, with approximately 100 exhibitors and 5,000 people in attendance. Its goal was, and is, to produce an event which contributes significantly to the economy while promoting the conservation and preservation of nature and wildlife through its educational outreach programs and its focus on the visual arts. SEWE has an economic impact of $63.8 million annually to the state.

So, come join us if you can for the "Wild in the Kitchen" cooking demonstrations at 10:30 a.m., 12:30 p.m., 2:30 p.m., and 4:30 p.m. on Friday and Saturday, and 10:30 a.m., 12:30 p.m. and 2:30 p.m. on Sunday in the Certified SC tent in front of the Gaillard Auditorium on Calhoun Street. The 11 participating chefs are from our Fresh on the Menu restaurants and will be on hand to cook some delicious recipes using locally grown products or wild caught seafood. Thanks to some of our Certified South Carolina members, the chefs eagerly anticipate using fresh, local products like quail and wild caught shrimp.

We will have 22 South Carolina vendors on hand participating with the Department displaying their products at this event. We could have had more if we had the space. We'll be there so that patrons can learn more on all our programs including Fresh on the Menu, Certified Roadside Markets, and MarketMaker just to name a few.

We're thrilled to participate in this year's SEWE event and looking forward to getting more people excited about buying locally grown South Carolina products to support farmers and farming. Stop by to see our booth and say hello and learn a little more about what your South Carolina Department of Agriculture is doing to promote our state's agriculture.

Hugh E. Weathers,
Commissioner

USDA to Measure the Financial Health of the Ag Industry

The U.S. Department of Agriculture's National Agricultural Statistics Service (NASS) will conduct an Agricultural Resource Management Survey (ARMS). This survey will provide farmers and ranchers with an opportunity to provide accurate, real-world data that will help shape the policies, programs and issues that affect them.

"ARMS asks a small, but representative, sample of farmers about their operation in order to understand the current financial state of U.S. agriculture," said Eddie Wells, director of the NASS South Carolina Field Office. "Participation in ARMS is so important because government and agricultural leaders use the information needed to make sound decisions that impact the future of farmers, their families, their businesses and their communities."

The survey will be conducted during February and March. NASS will reach out to nearly 35,000 producers nationwide, including 200 producers in South Carolina. Producers will be asked to provide data on their operating expenditures, production costs and household characteristics.

"Farm organizations, the USDA, other government agencies, members of Congress, and State and local officials use the collective information from ARMS to answer questions and make important decisions concerning the economic viability of American agriculture, the rural economy and other emerging issues," explained Wells.

As with all NASS surveys, information provided by respondents is confidential by law. NASS safeguards the confidentiality of all responses, ensuring no individual respondent or operation can be identified.

The economic data gathered in ARMS will be published in the annual Farm Production Expenditures report on August 5. All NASS reports are available online at www.nass.usda.gov.
